Reclaiming Urban Rivers

Historical Background

Nearly all major cities were built on a river.

Rivers were traditionally used for transport, fishing, and recreation.

Industrial development and rising populations later led to:

-More sewage from houses being discharged into the river.

-Pollution from 31_____ on the river bank.

In 1957, the River Thames in London was declared biologically 32_____

Recent Improvements

Seals and even a 33_____ have been seen in the River Thames.

Riverside warehouses are converted to restaurants and 34_____

In Los Angeles, there are plans to:

Build a riverside 35 _____

Display 36_____ projects.

In Paris, 37_____ are created on the sides of the river every summer.

Transport Possibilities

Over 2 billion passengers already travel by 38_____ in cities around the world.

Changes in shopping habits mean the number of deliveries that are made is increasing.

Instead of road transport, goods can be transported by large freight barges and electric 39_____, or, in future, by 40_____

31	Factories	However, as cities grew to over a million inhabitants, the impact on the rivers became more serious. In addition, other types of pollution increased, as factories were built beside the river and discharged their waste materials into the water
32	Dead	As recently as 1957, scientists at London's Natural History Museum declared that the River Thames was dead in biological terms, as the water was too filthy to support any kind of life
33	Whale	These days you can see seals swimming in the water, and recently people had to try to rescue a whale, which had got lost and swum up the river from the sea by mistake

34	Apartments	Warehouses that were once used for storing goods are now being converted into expensive restaurants and also into apartments with river views
35	Park	an architect has plans to revitalise the banks of the river and to make a park there which can provide facilities for sports as well as a natural environment for relaxing in
36	Art	It's been proposed that facilities could be provided for displaying projects related to various kinds of art that have been produced by local people, for example
37	Beaches	In the city of Paris, During the summer months of July and August, all the traffic is banned from the roads by the sides of the river, and the banks are transformed into beaches
38	Ferry	Already, more than two billion passengers use the ferry to travel in cities around the world, like Istanbul, San Francisco and New York, and these numbers are set to rise further
39	Bikes	When the barge docks at the riverside the parcels could be taken the last few kilometres to their final destination on cargo bikes, electric ones of course
40	Drone	this is already happening in the Dutch city of Amsterdam, and in future the final stage could even be carried out by drone, although at present this isn't allowed
